Accessibility Statement

Navon Architecture Studio | Last updated: 20 August 2026

Our commitment

Navon Architecture Studio is committed to enabling equal, respectful and convenient access to its website and services for people with disabilities.

Accessibility approach

The website has been designed with reference to the Israeli Equal Rights for Persons with Disabilities (Service Accessibility Adjustments) Regulations, 2013, Israeli Standard 5568 and the Web Content Accessibility Guidelines (WCAG) 2.0 at Level AA. The studio continues to review the website and improve accessibility as content and technology evolve.

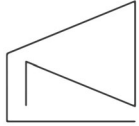

Measures used on the website

- Clear heading hierarchy, descriptive page structure and consistent navigation.
- Keyboard-accessible navigation, links, buttons and project filters.
- Alternative text or accessible labels for meaningful images and interface controls.
- Readable text, responsive layouts and support for browser zoom on desktop and mobile devices.
- Visible focus states, reduced-motion support and sufficient colour contrast for essential text and controls.
- Contact information provided in more than one format, including email and telephone.

Known limitations

Architectural portfolios rely heavily on visual material. Some project photographs, drawings, renderings or externally hosted media may not yet provide an equivalent description of every visual detail. If you need information shown in an image, drawing or project presentation in an alternative format, please contact us and we will make reasonable efforts to provide it.

Content or services supplied by third parties may be subject to the accessibility arrangements of those providers. We welcome reports of any specific difficulty.
